

Book signing to be at En Masse

FOR THE FREDERICK NEWS-POST

Author P.J. Allen, of Frederick, will do a book signing from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday at En Masse, 114 N. Market St., Frederick.

Her recent book, "Dead Reckoning in Frederick," is set in the city. "As with my previous books, a social issue drives the story," said Allen in a news release. "In 'Dead Reckoning in Frederick,' I wrote the story to expose how the rich and powerful can prey on those most vulnerable and that sometimes there are unimaginable forces helping to hold those who exploit accountable."

In "Dead Reckoning," paranormal photographer Kayla Dunn discovers a murdered girl in Carroll Creek. No one believes there is any connection between the victim and the team's challenging assignment from the Frederick County Landmarks Foundation. As paranormal activities continue to increase in Frederick's heritage homes and buildings, it becomes apparent that the spirits have a message.

Allen has worked to promote health and education in developing countries in South Asia, Africa, Eurasia and the Middle East. "Dead Reckoning" is her fourth novel, following "Deadly Truths," "The Yeti Quotient" and "Lies Beneath Ellicott City." The books are available at Curious Iguana and Barnes and Noble (Frederick) and online at Poets and Prose, AuthorHouse and Amazon. For more information, visit www.pjallen.com.
